Humors of the Campaign.

The New York Sun, an independent paper, lets off There was but little good humor in the late political campaign; few good songs, and but a few passably good caricatures. It is a relief, therefore, to meet a little good humored satire at its close. It is said "they may laugh who win," and the Democrats, who circulate the following "Free Tickacres, one-half of which is cleared and in a fine state of cul- et," are enjoying their privilege.
